most right angles. "I don't murmur sympathy," he said. "I was there all right enough; these things may be a little different, but I don't want to get at it. But I think there was a lot of it below the surface, and I was afraid that we shouldn't get at it. I don't think it helped much," he said, answering Nora's look. "Our boys are going to be shot as soon as the war is over, most as if the birds carried the news, as if it was borne on the wind; you can't help it. I don't want to see any more of this evening. I use a man coming down the side of the mountain. He looked like a soldier, but I don't know his rank and he didn't tell me. He was a chap about my own age, sturdy and well set up, and I spoke him well, and he told me something about the war. I don't mind that look—I can't explain—why I shouldn't take my fancy. He said he had no luck, and was half starving. I took him to the camp, and I made a clean breast of it, and I could not, by the way he shot his eyes at me, but I didn't say anything. I told him that the digging thing was a little different, but I don't know how long before you were dug, and your mother was anxious and ailing; but he made him sound good, and I told him he was a good cook for him; he ate like a wolf, trying not to do so, and while I was at it I told him my plan, and I said I'd found the gold all right, and I offered to let him have the share. He said he didn't like from the very next day. I told him that I was and what I'd been doing, but he didn't say anything. I told him that I didn't like, because, out there, as you know, men are pretty free spoken—unless they're not. Nora mixed him another weak glass of whiskey and water and he drank it down, almost monotonously, as if he were repeating something

"Gone!" echoed Nora, with the apprehension of what was coming.

"He'd taken the horse and cart; and—" his voice grew hoarser, and he stretched out his clenched hand;—and he'd taken the gold; but one little bag of dust, a hundred-thousandth part of the whole."

"Father!" uttered Nora, with tender pity.

"On the top of his pannikin I found a piece of paper. Here it is: I've got it still."

With a hand that shook he took an envelope of wadded paper from his pocket, and a dirty piece of paper.

"This is it!" He read in a low, strained voice, "I have been the property of a hardener and a woman-woman. It's been your misfortune to be afflicted in her condition; I've taken the swag because I don't mean to come back any more. You'll soon make it up. Your partner, Bradshaw."

PROGRESS.

TURKISH DISASTER.

THE BIG BATTLE FRONTS.

Earl Kitchener stated in the House of Lords that, despite unfavourable weather, noteworthy progress had been made during the past few weeks near Reims and in Alsace.

An Amsterdam message says German reinforcements in Flanders forebode an attempt to pierce the Allies' line north-west of Ypres. The Turks undertook their attack on Sarykaniash with scarcely any supply wagons or field artillery, and two army corps were almost annihilated.

The Russians report a success at a village in the Mlava district, North Poland.

SITUATION REVIEWED.

TIDE OF BATTLE.

NOTEWORTHY PROGRESS.

LONDON, Jan. 7. Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, speaking in the House of Lords last evening, reviewed the ebb and flow of the tide of battle during the past few weeks.

He said that, despite unfavourable weather, noteworthy progress had been made eastward of Reims and in Southern Alsace. Notwithstanding the transfer of troops to Poland, the Germans had left sufficient strength to hold the trenches in the west, but their aspirations in Poland had suffered a severe check. They evidently realised the infinite difficulty of winter operations in Russia.

After contemplating the Serbian troops on their extraordinary victories, and Russia on her noble achievements in the Caucasus, Earl Kitchener remarked that the much-heralded success of the war began numbered 20,000, and Sir John French's forces had been increased by territorial units and new divisions, including a fine Canadian regiment.

Earl Kitchener stated that Germany's great initial advantage of numerical superiority and extensive war preparations was certainly diminishing. Lord Kitchener said he was not disconcerted with the progress of recruiting. As many recruits are coming forward as could be dealt with.

Lord Curzon urged that the utmost number of men should be sent to the front with the least delay. He believed that considerably more than two millions were needed—possibly nearer three. Lord Curzon expressed the utmost satisfaction at recent events in Egypt.

The Earl of Crewe said that although our contribution to the fighting line was proportionately less than that of some other countries, our overwhelming military qualities, and the general services it had rendered to the Allies, must not be overlooked.

GERMAN RETROSPECT.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 7. The "Lokal Anzeiger," in an article headed "Retrospect," admits that Britain's efforts prove her will to conquer, "which," the paper adds, "we honour. The French have shown praiseworthy military qualities, and Joffre is among the most excellent of Generals. The Russians have displayed extraordinary tenacity, and their artillery has shown unexpected accuracy."

THE FORMIDABLE.

GERMANS CLAIM CREDIT.

SUBMARINE'S EXPLOIT.

LONDON, Jan. 7.

German newspapers publish official reports which claim that the Germans torpedoed the battleship Formidable, which was recently blown up in the Channel. Destroyers pursued the submarine which was responsible, but did not succeed in damaging it.

ANOTHER BATTLESHIP.

RUMOUR DENIED.

LONDON, Jan. 7.

The Official Press Bureau denies the rumour circulated in America that the battleship Thunderer was mined in the North Sea on November 7.

A DESPERATE ATTACK.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 7.

The Turks at Sarykaniash outnumbered the Russians ten to one. The Turks adopted German tactics, and attacked the front and flanks simultaneously. They swarmed down columns which would have defeated Swiss mountaineers, waist deep in snow. Half-naked, ragged, and frozen they attacked the Russians, who reserved their fire till the enemy was within 400 yards, and opened a devastating machine gun whirlwind.

The Russians then retired, drawing the Turks after them into the zone of the Russian artillery. The artillery and reinforcements completed the destruction of the enemy.

TWO ARMY CORPS.

ALMOST ANNIHILATED.

It is officially stated that, although abundantly provided with supplies, the 9th and 10th Turkish army corps undertook a movement against Sarykaniash across mountainous country covered with snow, the roads running along steep cliffs almost without supply convoys or field artillery. They relied chiefly on the sympathy and help of the native Mussulmans, whom Turkish emissaries had previously approached. Both corps were almost annihilated, the remainder of one corps being taken prisoners, with three divisional generals.

PROBABLE BLOCK.

ATHEENS, Jan. 7.

Turkish and German engineers are collecting a large number of old steamers laden with stones and earth at the Dardanelles. Apparently they intend to sink them, to prevent the passage of the Allies' ships.

THE GOEBEN.

DAMAGED BY MINES.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 7.

A Constantinople telegram states that the battle-cruiser Goeben struck two Russian mines near the Bosphorus. The repairs will occupy three months.

POLAND AND GALICIA.

A RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 7.

A communiqué states: "We suddenly attacked the village of Horvitz, in the Mlava district, on the 6th, and annihilated the enemy with the bayonet. The important changes have taken place elsewhere. Our offensive continues in Bukovina."

SLIGHT PROGRESS.

A LIVELY CANNONADE.

PARIS, Jan. 7.

A communiqué states: "The only notable incident on Wednesday was a lively cannonade at Zillebeke (a couple of miles south-east of Ypres). We maintained our positions in the Argonne. We made slight progress at Bois de St. Pierre, near Arras."

A communiqué earlier yesterday stated: "We repulsed two attacks on the dunes and south-east of St. Georges. We advanced 100 metres north-west of Reims, and recaptured trenches in La Grueville Wood. We repulsed violent attacks near Fontaine Madure."

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6.

Great reinforcements have been made by the Germans in the Courtrai district, foreboding an attempt to pierce the line north-west of Ypres.

Germans in Liege and other towns are requisitioning copper from doors, pumps, and other articles.

TYPHOID AT ANTWERP.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 7.

A message from Brussels states that part of the 35th regiment refused to go to the front, and a few night took place in the town hall, where the soldiers were billeted. Many windows were broken. The health of the German troops in Antwerp is unsatisfactory. Two hundred are in hospital suffering from typhoid.

ALONG FRENCH COAST.

LONDON, Jan. 7.

Three Zeppelins were reported between Calais and Gravelines on Wednesday morning, and six German aeroplanes flew over Dunkirk, which were apparently acting as scouts.

One of the latter dropped bombs on a suburb of Dunkirk, without doing any material damage. Commander Benson and a French aircraft chased off the intruders.

SHOT AT HIS COUNTRYMEN.

LONDON, Jan. 7.

An invalid British officer states that during an attack on the British trenches a German soldier, who was slightly wounded, was dragged into our trenches. "Give me a rifle," he said, "I have lived 27 out of 30 years in England. It is time some of those swine over there were wounded."

He fired at the Germans all day, and was taken to the rear in the evening as a prisoner.

GERMAN BLUNDER.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 6.

Roman Catholics are in a state of consternation over the arrest of Cardinal Mercier. It is said that if the Reichstag was in session the Centre Party would insist on an explanation. The step is described as an unpardonable blunder.

It is semi-officially stated in Berlin that everybody is agreed Cardinal Mercier was justified in counselling civilians in several times and urging them to keep quiet, but that he transgressed authority, and misconstrued his rights and obligations to the Church, when in a pastoral he intervened in a political quarrel between nations.

ENEMY'S ACCUSATION.

DENUNCIATION OF BRITAIN.

Herr Alfred Lohmann, addressing a meeting of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce, accused the British of every sort of crime, including the sinking of German vessels in neutral waters, transporting German women and children from West Africa to fight against Germany in Poland, and the use of submarines to sink German ships.
